Joseph Lane, of Oregon, on the Report of the Peace Conference: Delivered in the Senate of the United States, March 2, 1881 But, sir, to go to the votes. It will be borne in mind, and every Senator on this floor will hear me out in my statement, that while the Davis resolutions - the series of which I speak - were up, various propositions were made to amend them, and I voted against all amendments. There are Senators here at this moment who will sustain me when I say that, when in caucus and we had under consideration this series of resolutions, I said, and said it boldly and in plain terms, that if every man from every southern State of this Union would come here and say, for the sake of peace, if you please, or any other reason, he was willing to abandon his equality, his right in the common territory, then, if alone, I would stand and protest against it; protest that he had no right to surrender a constitutional right; that none but a coward would do it; that every man had a right in the common territory; that it was his privilege, and he should never surrender it with my permission. On the other hand, I said that if every northern man in the Senate Chamber - nay, but even every northern citizen - expressed a desire to surrender his right, his equality, his privilege, to go to the common territories with his property, I should enter my solemn protest against it, and insist that he had a constitutional right to go there which he should never surrender with my...
